CENTRAL RAILROAD Of Iowa,

ITS SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD

First Mortgage Bonds!

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

At 95 and Accrued Interest.

This road runs through the richest and most thickly settled portion of this magnificent State and is the only link wanting to connect St Louis and St Paul by a direct line, 117 miles shorter than any other.

It runs through the great coal fields of Southern Iowa to the North, where coal is indispensable and must be carried.

It runs from the great lumber regions of the North, through a district of country which needs that staple of this prime necessity.

It does not run through a wilderness, where it would wait for years for a population to give it business but through a tier of Counties which are now producing about twenty million bushels of grain, most of which is freight for railroads.

Forty five miles are just finished and the Superintendent reports that on the portion open for business the net earnings are more than the interest liabilities.

Sixty miles more are graded, and a million and a half of dollars have already been expended on the work.

The mortgage is made to the Farmers Loan and Trust Co., and bonds can be issued only at the rate of $16,000 per mile, or only half the amount upon some other roads. Special security is provided for the principal and for the payment of interest.

First mortgages upon most railroads are the very safest investments, and so far as we can learn, there is not a single completed line in the North-west which is not only paying its interest fully a good dividend upon its stock.

The immense grain and other freights to be carried away, and the domestic supplies to be brought in, ensure a profitable business.

First Mortgage Bonds for so small an amount upon a road running through such a rich and already well settled part of Iowa, can well be recommended as a perfectly safe as well as very profitable investment. At the present rate they pay about ten per cent. on the investment. Over $100,000 have already been taken by the Company's officers and others interested in the enterprise. Pamphlets, with map, may be obtained and subscriptions will be received in Bangor by

OUR COMMON SCHOOLS. Superintendent Johnson's summary of school statistics for 1868-9, which has been prepared and forwarded to school officers, contains many facts of importance. An analysis of the tables, which we find in the Kennebec Journal, reveals that while in some respects the record of the past year compares unfavorably with that of 1859, yet compared with the summary of 1867-8, there is a decided advance apparent. In 1859, the returns showed a larger number of scholars, a better register attendance, and a larger amount received from school funds.

The whole number of scholars between the ages of four and 21, for the last eleven years are as follows:

		Increase.
1859,	242,700	—
1860,	241,929	2,220
		Decrease
1861,	243,171	1,749
1862,	241,771	1,600
1863,	239,329	2,242
1864,	235,188	4,141
1865,	229,797	5,391
1866,	228,378	419
1867,	228,388	990
1868,	225,200	3,188
		Increase
1869,	226,114	913

The average attendance in 1869 is 50 per cent of the whole, in 1868 it was 42 per ct. making a gain of 8 per cent in attendance the last year. The amount of money raised per scholar in 1869 is $2,93, in 1868 it was $2,65, rate of increase 10½ per cent. Attendance has not kept pace with the increase of capital, therefore the Superintendent concludes that we still need "better instruction, better supervision and increased parental interest to attract or compel a better attendance."

The average length of schools reported for 1869, is 104 days, for 1868, 102 days, making an increase in 1869 of 4 1-2 per cent. The amount of money reported raised in the same years, was $598,094 for 1869, and $... for 1868, an increase in favor of the last year of 14 per cent. Teachers wages increased from 1867 to 1868, 3 per cent., while board increased in the same time 5 per cent., so that upon the whole the teachers were 2 per cent. worse off than before. A statement of wages paid in several States shows that Maine is paying teachers less than other States. Probably if Mr. Johnson were to compare the quality or grade of schools with the price paid, the comparison would be more favorable to Maine as to the price paid. 'We have a large territory, only a few cities, and consequently must have smaller and cheaper schools than in other States which have more population in proportion to their area. The number of new school houses built last year is 121, at a cost of $175,904; the previous year 93, at a cost of $272,744. Of school houses and school districts the Superintendent says:

The number both of school houses and districts, is reported larger than the previous year. The number of new school houses built last year is 121, at a cost of $17,691, the previous year 93, at a cost of $272,744. Of the latter sum $200,000 were expended on two school houses, one in Portland, $125,000, the other in Lewiston, $75,000. Deducting this amount, $72,744 will remain as the cost of 91 school houses, averaging about $800 each. Of the former sum $37,772 were expended in the erection of one school building in Lewiston, and $25,000 for another in Rockland, making the average cost of 119 school houses nearly $950 indicating a trifling increase in the value of the latter. The cost of materials and labor, was about the same for each year, favoring the latter if either. The increase of school districts is an unfavorable indication, except so far as the increase shows new settlements and an extended populated area.

In noticing the increase of the amount of money raised, Mr. Johnson comes to the conclusion that "the people of Maine are ready to raise any reasonable amount for the support of the public schools, while they very justly demand adequate returns." Of the school fund he says:

The amount derivable from the School Fund and Bank Tax for distribution among the towns, has been constantly decreasing the last ten years. In 1859 the whole amount thus distributed was $80,201, in 1869, only $15,858, or less than one-fifth the former amount. This diminution is due to the entire loss of the State bank tax. Other States have supplied this loss by diverting to school uses, licenses, fines, taxes on domestic animals, passenger traffic, &c. The present School Fund receives small additions annually from the sales of State lands. These, however, will soon cease, and it is very desirable that ways be devised to afford increments from other sources.

The Erie-Vanderbilt quarrel is again before Judge Barnard, of the Supreme Court. During the Erie war of last spring Fiske and Gould repudiated the arrangement under which the fight of 1867-68 was settled, and sought to recover the money paid thereunder. Among other suits brought was one to recover nearly $5,000,000 paid in cash and bonds for shares of the company held by Vanderbilt. The suit was brought on the ground that this arrangement was perfected by a fraudulent conspiracy with the officers of the Erie company. The relief demanded was special, making the case an equity suit.

THE RED RIVER REBELLION. A Pembina correspondent of the St. Paul Press says the people of the British Red River settlement demand of the Canadian Government certain guaranties, before being incorporated in that government. Among them are: 1st. The right to elect their own Legislature. 2d. The Legislature to have the power to pass all laws of a local nature, by a two-thirds vote, over the veto of the Executive. 3d. A free homestead and pre-emption law similar to that of the United States. 4th. A portion of the public land to be donated for the support of schools and the construction of roads and bridges. 5th. Treaties with the several tribes of Indians calculated to secure peace and quiet on the frontier.

The October flood in Maine had a parallel in Venezuela. A disastrous inundation occurred in the vicinity of Merida, which caused heavy damages to property. Several lives were lost. The town of Mulimichao is completely destroyed. The roads in the country are impassable on account of heavy rocks having been carried by the current and lodged in the highways. The cemetery was washed away and many corpses and skeletons were found floating in the water. The flood at last accounts was decreasing.

Magazines for December.

PUTNAM'S. The opening article of this popular magazine is devoted to an exposition of the wise statesmanship for which Great Britain has attained the "Sovereignty of the Seas." The hints it gives for the restoration of our lost prestige on the ocean are worthy of most serious consideration at the hands of Congress. Mr. Putnam continues the "Leaves from a Publisher's Letter Book"; there is an article trenching somewhat on the domain of polemics, called "The Unestablished Church." Professor John Bascom discusses the relative position of men and women in a paper entitled "The Foci of the Social Ellipse," and Professor T. B. Maury writes on "Dumb Guides to the Pole," in which Captain Bent's theory of an open polar sea is tested by the zoology of the Arctic regions. The poetry of the number consists of "Crimson, Blue and Gold," by G W Bungay, and "Memory is Immortal," by Mrs Elizabeth Stoddard, and in an early effort of Father Hyacinthe, written at the age of sixteen, both the original in French and the translation being in rhymed heroic verse.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY. Mr. James Parton continues his articles on the public service with an enquiry into "Uncle Sam's Treatment of his Servants"; a social essay from Mr F Sheldon, with the title of "The Dead Level," agreeably detains us for a few pages, when Mr. John Hay asks our attention to an account of the killing of Joe Smith, the Mormon prophet. "From the Papers of Col. Frederick Ingham," which the Rev. Edward Everett Hale has contributed to former numbers of the Atlantic, are continued, and so is Caroline Chesebro's novel of The Foe in the Household. The third essay on The Increase of Human Life, by Dr. Edward Jarvis. Three other papers on subjects connected with human economy occupy a considerable space in the number. There is but one story, (Mr. Bruce) by Alice Eliot, and one poem, (In My Vineyard) by Bayard Taylor. The last contribution is the first of a series of Arctic sketches by I I Hayes.

THE GALAXY. The eighth volume of this periodical closes with a very agreeable number, in which the article that most of all arrests attention is the last one, The Morals and Manners of Journalism, being the leading one of this series on the subject by Mr Richard Grant White, who contributes also the notices of new books. Anthony Trollope gives us the second of an Editor's Tales in Josephine De Montmorenci, which appears simultaneously in the Galaxy in New York, and St. Paul's Magazine in London. Dr. John C. Draper's article on The Breath of Life is a popular exposition of the relation of the atmosphere to animal and vegetable existence. A sketch of Cardinal d'Andrea by his secretary, two pleasant stories, a lively "report" by Jane Strongith orm, on Woman in the Legislature, with some pieces of song, make up the remainder of the number, except what is filled by the serial novels of Susan Fielding and Put Yourself in his Place, and the regular Miscellany, Drift Wood, &c., &c.

The December Riverside, in closing the volume, brings forward some of its old and favorite contributors. Mr Herrick gives the frontispiece, Wood Hauling; Hans Andersen tells a Danish story; the Editor completes his account of book-making; Miss Thorne has a thrilling account of some children who once were caught on a Mississippi floe of ice. The Yo-Semite Fall has a picture, and Mother Goose has four pretty vignettes. Hunting in South Africa is described by an old hunter; Sophie May, of Prudy fame, tells of her Higgins Fright; and an anonymous writer describes old fashioned times in New England. Darley, the artist, illustrates some scenes from Scott; and Harry Bolingbroke describes a mimic encounter in a duck pond. Finally, a Christmas Carol from the French, with an English translation, holds the last page. Published by Hurd and Houghton, New York. Subscription $2,50.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE closes the year with a beautiful number. Lippincott is one of the handsomest magazines in this country, and its contents will compare favorably with any. This number is beautifully illustrated. Anthony Trollope's new novel is continued. Several good stories are The Actuary's Story, Incompatible, Beyond the Breakers, and One Woman of the World. It contains many useful papers beside.

THE LADY'S FRIEND. The Christmas number of this attractive monthly has two uncommonly beautiful steel engravings—companion pictures, The Departure and The Return. It has also a gay and stylish plate of colored fashions, and a Christmas title-page. The illustrations of caps, bonnets and coiffures are tasteful, and so are the captivating Costumes for Little Girls. Music—"The Angels are Waiting for Me." Amanda M Douglas concludes her excellent story. The Prize of Two Men's Lives; and Mrs Wood reveals the well kept secret of her novel of Roland Yorke. There is a sweet poem from Florence Percy, with the usual literary variety. The publishers offer great inducements to new subscribers, and we recommend our readers to inclose ten cents for a sample copy, to Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

JOHN H. LYNDE, - - PROPRIETOR.

MONDAY, NOV. 22, 1869.

The Brooklyn City Tammany canvassers were obliged to succumb to the popular clamor. Having fraudulently reviewed the returns so as to count in the ring candidate, the newspapers so severely went for them and the law officers so decidedly threatened them, that they backed square down, and allowed the Republican candidate for Sheriff to be elected. The result shows the deviltry of the gang: they only give up their nefarious purpose to defraud the electors by fear of personal chastisement. The World, being in a little quarrel with the Tammany ring, tells the truth about them at times. It says the Board of Supervisors were responsible for all these "irregularities." Hear its own words: "They appointed the worst class of men that could be found in the wards—all, or nearly all, of them claiming to be Democrats. The Supervisors of the even wards were, in nearly all cases, candidates for re-election, and hence their partiality." Eastern Democratic papers do not copy such little morsels as this. They are blind to the necessity, as the World intimates, of "purifying their local politics." Rural Democratic strength is wholly dependent upon being kept ignorant of the character of their metropolitan brethren.

We hasten to congratulate a New York Judge upon the rendering of one just and humane decision. The case was that of Beatrice Bissell, an infant in law, for a divorce from John B. Bissell, on the ground of abandonment. Defendant admitted abondonment but denied marriage. He had lived with her, and had given her a wedding ring as a blind to the people of their acquaintance. Upon his own testimony Judge Barnard decided that an actual marriage had taken place between the parties. He told Mr. Bissell very plainly that if he had designed by deception merely to ruin a confiding girl, and had bound himself in matrimony by a blunder, he must blame himself, and he must allow her divorce and alimony. A few such decisions as that would regulate a certain class of matrimonial confidence operators pretty effectually, and destroy a system which is so extremely baneful in the great cities.

As if to ratify Gov. Hoffman in his idea of an honest Legislature to result from a Tammany victory, that staunch Democratic chieftan, Mr. Benjamin Wood, turns up as one of the leaders in that policy gambling crowd who have been swindling the Government out of its dues from his correct line of business. That our readers may not mistake our surprise to be that a gambler should cheat the Government, let us hasten to assure them that our astonishment wholly arises from the fact that a Tammany Democrat should find it in his heart to do so. Democrats cannot be bought—that is the latest and best joke of Hoffman. They improve upon bribery by being at once the buyer, the seller and the article bought and sold.

Mr. Charles A. Dana, of the New York Sun, who lost his Custom House in expectancy and his temper at the same time, takes a charming course to silence criticism. He reviews his exchange list now and then and cuts off those who reprimand him for the mysterious changes that take place in the Sun's opinions when favors are withheld. He is thus getting noticed all over the country. There is a little anecdote in the books about one of the French Sovereigns who proclaimed his love for free speech by offering his people a chance to discuss state affairs with him, but if they differed from him, he illustrated his idea by kicking the disputants as a closing argument. This is Mr. Dana's idea, only fortunately his kicks against the great public opinion are as the protests of a cockroach against the popular loathing. His exchange list will be small indeed if he cuts off all who tell him the truth—that his Sun does not "shine for all," but is particularly brilliant in the dirty currents of blackguardism where no other planet stoops to enter.

The Irish Giant O'Baldwin brought his pugilistic wares to the wrong market when he came into Massachusetts to pummel somebody. New York Courts do not abuse the law in the rural districts about the Hub. He has just been sent to the House of Correction for eighteen months, and we presume that the soil of the old Bay State will not be contaminated by the bad blood of the "manly art" any more.

The Suez Canal.

The opening of the Suez Canal is justly celebrated as an important era in the navigation and trade of the East. In fact, if it is the success it is claimed to be, nearly the whole course of the East Indian trade must be changed, and the danger and expense materially lessened. Heretofore there has been a large trade across the Isthmus, notwithstanding all the difficulties of that mixed land and water passage. The commerce of the canal must be immense. In 1860, the maritime movement between Europe and America, and the East, by way of the Cape, amounted to 7,250,000 tons. The ascertained rate of progress from 1865 to 1870 would give for 1870 a total of 11,000,000 of tons. The difference in the routes is in favor of Suez to the extent of 3,000 leagues. Taking this fact into consideration, it is calculated that 6,000,000 of tons may be diverted through the new channel.

This canal is by no means a new project. Almost as far back as we have any account, the inhabitants of Egypt and those who traded in those parts contemplated a similar project, and imperfect channels have been employed to connect the Nile with the Red Sea and thus facilitate transportation. There were many difficulties in the way of this plan, however, and a canal direct from Suez to the Mediterranean was planned long before Napoleon visited that land.

The present undertaking was inaugurated by a Frenchman, M. De Lesseps. The company was organized more than ten years ago, but owing to the difficulties attending so immense a work, its progress has been slow until in the last few years. The aggregate capital necessary was found to be upward of one hundred million dollars.

The canal passes through four large natural lakes. The largest of these lakes is called Lac Amer, or the Bitter Lake, and is situated some ten miles north of Suez.—The other lakes are Lake Timsah, Lake Ballah, and Lake Menzaleh. Lake Timsah is the smallest of these, and has been drying up for a long time. These lakes are ten or fifteen miles distant from each other. The work of the company consisted in deepening the channel through these lakes, cutting a passage through intervening sections, and building the harbors at Port Said and Suez. The land was principally sandy, with occasional strata of calcareous blue slate. The difference of level, even at the highest calculation, is only four inches in the mile, so that the current will not be great. Whatever current there will be, will be broken by the lakes. Port Said is the Mediterranean entrance of the canal. It is 124 miles north of Alexandria and 30 miles north of Damietta. It is a mushroom city, such as we have had on the path of our Pacific railroad. It is now a large city, and promises to rival in importance and trade both Marseilles and Alexandria.

The Work-Shop of the World

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Nov. 5, 1869

Probably there is no one place which may be called the workshop of the world with more propriety than this great and busy city of 400,000 inhabitants, and the region lying close around it. If we go a few miles to the southwest we are among the carpet weavers of Kidderminster, whose products are largely exported to America, and are of every variety of pattern and texture. If we go a few miles South we find ourselves in Red Ditch, where the world's needles and fish hooks are made. Every girl and boy in America is familiar with the little articles of traffic which are produced at this point.

We go a few miles to the East and find the odd old city of Coventry where ribbons and watches commence their journey to the bonnets and pockets of American ladies. Swinging around a little to the North of Coventry we find the beautiful city of Leicester, where immense quantities of elastic goods for shoes and for various other purposes are manufactured for the United States. Here also gloves and fancy hosiery of every description are produced. Directly north is Burton-on-Trent where the world's supply of beer, ale, porter, &c., is brewed. The whole business of the town is devoted to one article of traffic. Many immense breweries are here, some of them covering 30 acres of ground. Cargoes of grain and hops are stored in the splendid brick buildings and lead one to inquire "for what purpose is all this wasted, for these materials might be sold for much and given to the poor." But alas! the poor people are content to take them in this manufactured form and literally "spend their money for that which is not bread," and "love to have it so." Immense trains of cars are constantly bearing away these articles to the markets of the world. The business is located here from the fact or fancy that the waters of the Trent are superior to all others for brewing.

Just to the Northwest is the Black Country, where ten thousand chimneys are forever belching forth fire by night and smoke by day, and beneath are the hidden stores of coal and iron. The whole region is honey-combed beneath and many parts have settled several feet, so that it is no strange thing to see buildings with one end settled far below the level of the other and ridge poles forming a great variety of angles with a true level. Here iron is king and is wrought into every form that is useful and ornamental, from cables and railroad bars to the most delicate ornament.

Having made the circuit of the contiguous towns we come back to Birmingham as the great centre. Here is the point for trade with all these places, and also the great central workshop. Here is the most elaborate plated ware to be found in the world. Here are steel pens enumerated by figures too extended to write, with the veritable Joseph Gillott of our boyhood memory as the extensive manufacturer. These pens are of all sizes and values, the common kinds being sold at about 24 for one cent. This was one of the chief manufacturing places for guns during our late war, and, notwithstanding the immense supplies then furnished and the fact that Colt and the Springfield Armory and hosts of other factories are busily at work at home, large shipments of guns and pistols are almost weekly made to America. Here are pins in countless numbers and every form and size and material that goes by the name of buttons. The most elegant enameled work is done here, and the Messrs. Chance send out the richest specimens of glass work that the human eye rests upon. They execute orders of all descriptions whether for Chrystal Palaces, or Light Houses, or most elaborate stained windows for churches, or ornaments, or table ware. They make almost everything but clothing from this frail and brittle material. It is here the patent Nut and Bolt Company produce these articles in sufficient quantities to bolt the universe together, and in the suburbs of the city is the spot where Wate & Bolton perfected and set in motion the Steam Engine and applied Gas to the purposes of illumination. In a word there is scarcely anything, from the most costly jewelry to the roughest forms of iron but is manufactured in this city.

This has ever been the leading district in national reforms and is appropriately represented by John Bright. The most liberal provision is made for the education of the people, and the Midland Institute and Free Library is one of the special provisions for furnishing a knowledge of science and providing reading matter for the masses. As in America, so in England, it is usual for each manufacturing locality to have some speciality and do but little out of that line, but Birmingham and its suburbs defy this custom and have a hand in every industry and are represented in every country and almost every family.

A certain American traveler is said to have come here a while since with a precious relic which had been dug up among the ruins of some one of the Italian cities, and which he had purchased at an exorbitant price. It was somewhat injured, and he applied to a certain workman here to repair it, and was astonished when told that he could purchase a new one at the establishment for a few pennies, and that the very article in question had been produced at that workshop. A part of the man's business was the manufacturing of relics for famous localities, which adepts bury and dig up and sell to wandering Americans at fabulous prices. It is whispered that in times past there has been more bogus money made in Birmingham than in all the rest of the United Kingdom, but the makers are now probably all dead and the wicked counterfeits will be seen no more.

From this busy district there is shipped to the United States an annual average of seven or eight millions of dollars worth of various kinds of material on which the government receives a duty averaging about thirty per cent. Other localities send as much and London and Liverpool very much more in value to America, but no locality produces so great a variety of goods for one market. All this immense exportation passes under the eye of our Consuls and receives a certificate at their hands and much depends on their vigilance and faithfulness. If goods are invoiced below their value, which sometimes occurs as low as 50 per cent, it is easily seen that the revenue of the government is robbed to a large extent. Hence it becomes the duty of Consuls to ascertain the truth of invoices, if possible, and protect the revenue.

Previous to the administration of President Grant each Consul in this Kingdom managed the affairs of his Consulate as he deemed best, only subject to the general instructions of the government. One of the first appointments of the present administration was that of Hon. F. H. Morse, of Maine, as Consul General of Great Britain. He has the general supervision of all the Consulates and through him all reports and dispatches are sent to Washington.—Mr. Morse is systematizing the whole business and it will soon become uniform. He was formerly a member of Congress from Maine and was appointed Consul to London by Mr. Lincoln in 1861. After eight years of service it was a graceful compliment on the part of General Grant to continue him in office and invest him with additional authority as Consul General. It was evidently best it should be so as he could bring the experience of eight years in the most important of our consulates to bear upon the whole system in this kingdom.

It seems surprising how the manufacturers here can afford to pay our tariff and yet leave a margin for profit, and compete with the manufacturers of America. The whole secret is found in the extremely low wages paid to operators, for certainly they are not as industrious as our people and no more cunning than our workmen. The difference is manifest in the contrast between the abodes of the working people here and the smiling cottages which our people own and call by the name of "Home," which means title deed and permanency.

J. E. G.

The Boston Courier says, "A curious fact was developed at the Free Trade Meeting in Buffalo, a few days ago. It was stated that a member of the Buffalo Free-trade League, when in Canada recently, discovered a circular from the Syracuse Salt Company, giving the prices at which it would deliver salt in Canada along the line of the Grand Trunk Railway. The highest price named was $1,60 gold, and the lowest $1,32 gold, equal to $1,85 and $2,21, currency. Of course these prices included freights, which must be deducted in order to ascertain the net price obtained by the Syracuse Salt Company. These freights have been ascertained to be from 42 cents to 72 cents, currency, per barrel, consequently the net price to the company is about $1 50 per barrel on the average. Now, what do you suppose the price charged at Syracuse is to American consumers?—$2,35 a bushels. That is, to-day the American consumer has to pay nearly four times as much for his salt of domestic manufacture, as the foreigner!

If this is a fact, the matter ought to be thoroughly exposed, and Congress ought to take such action as to remedy the evil. A heavy percentage of tariff on salt may not be specially burdensome, but onerous discriminations should not be made against our own consumers at all.

Sails vs. Steam

The opening of the Suez Canal, which took place on the 17th inst., bids fair to further strengthen the belief that the great carrying trade of the ocean is eventually to be performed by steam instead of wind. The design of the canal to shorten the distance between Europe and India, instead of increasing the fleet of sailing ships bids fair to become another strong agent—in case it should really prove navigable for large vessels—to drive them out of the India trade altogether. Some of the reasons for this opinion are set forth in a letter from Hon. F. A. Pike, of Maine, to the Portland Daily Advertiser, written in Liverpool on the 22d of October. Mr. Pike says:

It (the opening of the canal) is a great event. A canal a hundred miles long, three hundred feet wide on the top, twenty-six feet deep, and seventy two feet wide on the bottom, costing from eighty to a hundred millions of dollars, is something one don't often see. It is expected it will divert the whole trade of the east from the tedious passage round the Cape of Good Hope. The saving in distance is about seven thousand miles.

Besides throwing out large amounts of tonnage now engaged in the India trade by the saving of distance, sail vessels will suffer from the difficulty of navigation of the Red Sea. That sea is over thirteen hundred miles long, and is subject to a prevalence of winds from month to month akin to the monsoons. The shallows on either side are illy defined, and the safe way is to keep a direct course from end to end. So those tell me who are recently from there. The India steamers make it run in six days, but how long it will take a sail vessel on the average, no one knows. It has been suggested that sail vessels might take a tow, but that would be too much like taking a tow from Liverpool to New York. It would not pay.

The upshot of the matter will be that the Clyde-built propeller will drive sails off and do the whole of the East India business. That is, if the canal is a success in its whole length and breadth and depth, of which there is still some reasonable doubt.

Maine shipping will not suffer directly by this change of trade, because we have no ships there to be thrown out of employment. Before the rebellion we had a large tonnage between London and the East, but the English rebels drove us off and we never got back. Now the business itself will soon be gone and the ships engaged upon it will be crowded upon other overstocked channels of trade.

I mention this as one of the many indications one meets everywhere of the change of trade into steamers. The Mediterranean is full of such indications. Steam lines traverse it in all directions and lead from the various ports to different sections of Northern Europe. Almost the only vessels I saw at Venice were Clyde built propellers. The truth is that trade everywhere will have its conveniences and is willing to pay for them. The telegraph is more expensive than the mail bags, but it is handier, and the tradesman pays millions annually for its use. The express and steamboat are much more costly carriers than the sailing packet, but they fetch and carry with a certainty and celerity the packet cannot compass, and so they are supported liberally. We in Maine must be prepared to do the business of the world as the world wants it done, and so share in the profits that now enure exclusively to foreign nations. If we cannot revive the Maine ship as she used to be, we can furnish another, more to its present liking, and I write now because I would set our enterprising merchants thinking about it and not have them waste their energies on the impossible. It is in the power of Congress to give us cheap iron, coal and copper, and that is all we need. Our long sea coast invites us to the sea with irresistible force. All we ask of the law is an equal chance, and we will once more show our strength and ingenuity. Raleigh declared that the "people who commanded the seas commanded the wealth of the world." Let us not give them up without a struggle.

THRILLING ADVENTURE WITH INDIANS. A letter from Fort Fetterman, Wyoming Territory, to the Cheyenne Leader, states that on the 28th of October three men named McKenna, McAllister and Wentworth of Company K, 2d cavalry, went out hunting, and night overtook them fifteen miles from the fort, near the entrance of a canon. They turned into a secluded glen, and while one of them kept watch the other two made a bed and went to sleep for the night. About midnight, it being cold, the watchman very imprudently made a fire and laid down by the side of his companions doubtless not intending to go to sleep.—One of them warned him of his imprudence, but received an assurance that all was well and again fell asleep. It is probable the sentinel did the same. A few minutes afterwards a terrific discharge of firearms in such close proximity that the powder burned the faces of the sleepers, proved the folly of their watcher's feeling of security. The account says:

"One of the men, McKenna, did not move—a ball had pierced his temple, another his heart, and four had entered his breast. Death itself had succeeded its counterfeit. McAllister sprang up with a single exclamation, and fell back dead, pierced by a dozen bullets. Wentworth, who was sleeping between the two, was not scratched. Being a man of great nerve and much experience with the Indians, his plans were instantly matured and quickly executed. Seizing his pistol as he slipped from the side of his dead comrades, he shot the Indian who confronted him as he rose; jumped over his prostrate body; knocked down the next in his path with the butt of his weapon; dodged the rest; sprang in among the ponies, from which the savages had dismounted, and running through the herd gained the creek, and under cover of its friendly bushes escaped his pursuers, and came barefoot over the jagged rocks and prickly pears to the post, where he arrived about 8 o'clock, in a condition to move the heart of the most unfeeling. The flesh of his heels and the balls of his feet were worn to the bone, and on their raw surface he had made most of his terrible march for life.

On receipt of the information, the company instantly proceeded to the place and found the bodies as he had described, but, strange to say, neither scalped nor mutilated. Stranger still, their guns, ammunition, overcoats, saddles and bed blankets were all there undisturbed. One of their horses had been shot and left; the other three were taken off by the Indians."

PERPETUAL MOTION. A dispatch to the Boston Advertiser says Commissioner Fisher, of the Patent Bureau, received a funny letter the other day, from a man in Canada. He says he has discovered the secret of perpetual motion, and wants to get out patent in the United States. He has so much confidence in his scheme, that he proposes to build a car or wagon, and come to that city by perpetual motion power. He states that he has a great and profound reverence for the memory of Washington, and is anxious that Congress should make the necessary appropriation for building the machine and placing the Washington monument on it, so that it could be taken about the country on wheels, and allowed to remain a few weeks in each of our principal cities. He thinks the scheme would increase our veneration for the man whom it commemorates.

New Method of Extracting Teeth Without Pain
DR. E. T. WASGATT,
Surgeon Dentist,
Has purchased an apparatus for producing local anæsthesia by the vapor of ether, invented by the celebrated DR. B. W. RICHARDSON, of London.
By using this instrument, the patient gets rid of the dread of taking ether, for the spray is only applied to the teeth and gums, and does not affect the patient in the least. DR. WASGATT has been using the ether spray for the past few weeks with marked success, extracting six to eight teeth at one sitting, and his patients say they never will take ether when they can get the ether spray applied to the gums.

Consumption can be Cured.
Read the Evidence.
"Facts are stubborn things," and it is to facts alone that it is desired to direct the attention of the readers of this article.
Many years of severe and thorough practical trial have demonstrated beyond the peradventure of a doubt the fact that the medicines prepared by me, and known as SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS, SCHENCK'S SEAWEED TONIC, and SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, have proved extraordinarily successful in the cure of diseases of the pulmonary organs, and what is called Consumption.
I am fully aware that there are many persons whose prejudices rule them so completely that "proofs strong as Holy Writ" would fail to convince them of the efficacy of my remedies; and that there are others who, under no circumstances, could be prevailed upon to admit their merits, simply because such an admission would prove detrimental to their pecuniary or social interests. Fortunately for the welfare of mankind, the prejudiced portion of the community is small. They are found here and there, but compared with the masses, the world's population, their number is so small that I desire them, and address myself to those who are willing to listen to the facts of reason, and who are prepared to admit the claims of logic to belief.
Nearly all who are familiar with my history know that I was almost dead with consumption, and that I had almost abandoned hope, and that the prospect of the future, both temporal as well as spiritual, was dark. I was under the treatment of the best physicians, and there was but a poor chance left for me. After all of these I had but little chance of life. I had all but resigned myself to despair, and cared little whether I lived or died. I felt I would soon engage in the battle against them. I had been suffering from that disease, and my prospects of life seemed gone. I will now endeavor to prove that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED, and that the medicines I prepare—THE MANDRAKE PILLS, SEAWEED TONIC, and PULMONIC SYRUP—will, if used in strict accordance with the directions, in a majority of cases effect what was by all faculty pronounced impossible, the cure of consumption.
An ounce of solid fact is worth a pound of theory. Let me, therefore, present the facts in my own individual experience. Many years ago I was a confirmed consumptive, and like thousands of other unfortunates, was given up to die. Eminent physicians pronounced my case hopeless, and told me I had no preparations to make for the final solemn event, that I had better make them speedily. I believed this just as confidently as did the persons who thus affectionately informed me that my days were numbered, and that recovery was impossible. Still, the desire to live lingered in my bosom. I was young, and clung to life with the same tenacity that young men and old men too, ordinarily do. I did not feel willing to abandon hope as long as a single vestige of it remained. I had full faith in the skill and information conveyed to me by my physicians, but still there was a lingering belief that something could be done, though I knew not in what direction to seek for the much desired relief.
It was at this gloomy and eventful period of my history that I first learned of the roots and herbs from which my remedies for this dreadful disease are now prepared. I procured and used them, and to the utter amazement of all—physicians, friends and neighbors—began to improve. My entire system commenced to undergo a complete renovation. Expectoration, which formerly had been difficult and painful, now became comparatively easy. I threw off daily large quantities of offensive yellow matter. At the same time my long lost appetite returned. I ate freely of such food as was palatable to me, and which was at the same time nutritious and wholesome. Expectoration became less copious and less offensive, exhausting night sweats ceased, the racking and harrassing cough abated, the fever broke, the pain departed, flesh planted itself on my sadly wasted frame, and with flesh came strength and full health. From a mere skeleton I became a stout, strong robust man, and I have maintained both strength and flesh to this day. I weigh two hundred and thirty five pounds, I am blest with an appetite which suffices but few men, while my digestive organs are amply equal to all the requirements of a healthful condition of my system.
Now, be it remembered all these wonderful changes were wrought by the use of the medicines I prepare—MANDRAKE PILLS, SEAWEED TONIC and PULMONIC SYRUP. A cure seemingly so miraculous naturally created astonishment in the minds of those who knew me. I was literally besieged on all sides. I had visitors daily who besought me to give them the remedies which had wrought the wonderful restoration and had wrested me from the very jaws of death. Letters were received by scores importuning me to impart the secret and inform the writers where the specifics for consumption could be obtained. Others, who were too weak to travel, not satisfied with writing, sent for and consulted me in regard to their cases. To all these applications I responded as I was able.
I had fully regained my health, and gratitude for the happy result prompted me to turn my attention to the science of medicine, with the hope of thereby being able to be of service to my suffering fellow creatures. I devoted myself closely to my studies, and more especially to that branch of them relating to the terrible disease from which I had suffered so long and so much. I investigated it in all its fearful phases, in order to assure myself that my case was not an exceptional one. The closer my investigations the more satisfactory were my conclusions. I felt convinced that tens of thousands of my fellow-creatures were dying annually from consumption whose cases were not as desperate and apparently hopeless as mine had been, and I argued from this that remedies which had proven so effective with me would prove equally so with others. I prepared my medicines in a pleasant and attractive form, and announced them to the world. The results are well known. Thousands of suffering men, women and children, who were on the way to the grave, have been cured, and are to-day living evidences of the fact that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED and I think I may say, without arrogating to myself any more than is justly my due, that I have had as much experience in the treatment of consumption as any other person in the country, and that my success has been wonderfully great.
Let the reader remember that these are not mere fancied statements. They are positive living facts, of which I am the living evidence.
There is an old adage which says "What has been done may be done." I have been completely cured of consumption by the remedies I now offer to the public. Thousands of others have testified to similar happy results from their use, and thousands of others might be benefitted as I have been could they but be prevailed upon to try the virtue of The Mandrake Pills, Seaweed Tonic and Pulmonic Syrup. All that is necessary is to convince the most skeptical of their merits is a fair trial.
Full directions accompany each of the medicines so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see me personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose I am personally at my Principal Office, No. 15 North Sixth street, corner of Commerce, Every Saturday.
Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the price is five dollars.
Price of the Pulmonic Syrup and Seaweed Tonic, each $1 50 per bottle, or $7 50 a half dozen. Mandrake Pills, 25 cents per box.

A Regular Habit of Body
Is absolutely essential to physical health and clearness of intellect. Nor is this all. Beauty of person cannot co-exist with an unnatural condition the bowels. A free passage of the refuse matter of the system through these natural waste pipes, is as necessary to the purity of the body as the free passage of the offal of a city through its sewers is necessary to the health of its inhabitants.
Indigestion is the primary cause of most of the diseases of the discharging organs, and one of its most common results is CONSTIPATION. This complaint, besides being dangerous in itself, has many disagreeable concomitants,—such as an unpleasant breath, a sallow skin, contaminated blood and bile hemorrhoids, headache, loss of memory, and general debility.
HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS remove all these evils by removing their immediate cause in the digestive organs, and regulating the action of the intestines. The combination of properties in this celebrated preparation is one of its chief merits. It is not merely a stimulant, or a tonic, or an anti-bilious agent, or a nervine, or a blood depurent, or a cathartic, but all these curative elements judiciously blended in one powerful restorative. It lends activity and vigor to the inert and enervated stomach, relieves the alimentary canal of its obstructions, and gives tone to the membrane which lines it, gently stimulates the liver, braces the nerves, and cheers the animal spirits. No other remedy possesses such a variety of hygienic virtues. It is to these characteristics that it owes its prestige as a household medicine. Experience has proved that it is as harmless as it is efficacious, and hence it is as popular with the weaker sex as with the stronger.
HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS is sold in bottles only, and the trade-mark blown in the glass and engraved on the label, with our steel engraved revenue stamp over the cork, is the test of genuineness. Beware of counterfeits.

Local and other Items.

—THE WEATHER is the most uncertain of all uncertain things this year. When our announcement of Saturday morning appeared, that the weather had "cleared off finely," and that we were rejoicing in "beautiful days, with clear, moonlight nights," the item was read in a dull morning with an overcast sky and every appearance of more rain, which before ten o'clock began to come down in torrents and continued falling heavily during the day with a heavy, southeast wind. The storm it seems had commenced west of us as our telegraphic reports of Saturday morning showed that it commenced raining in Louisville, Ky., Thursday evening, and in New York Friday morning.

Saturday night the weather cleared up and yesterday was a warm and beautiful day, but what the weather will be when this article sees the light, we dare not prognosticate. We can only hope for a continuance, which would be very grateful to our lumber dealers in enabling them to close up their fall business in good shape.

—THE STEAMERS were somewhat interrupted in their trip by the severity of the storm of Saturday.

Steamer Cambridge left Boston Friday afternoon as usual, and made Townsend Saturday morning at four o'clock, the sea being very rough and the wind blowing heavily. She remained there twenty-four hours, and arrived at her wharf yesterday at 1 P. M.

The City of Richmond also left Portland at her usual hour Friday evening, and after making long stops at Rockland, Belfast and Bucksport, arrived here Saturday evening at 8½ o'clock.

The Portland and Machias steamer, Lewiston, after coming to Rockland, crossed over to Castine, where Capt. Deering found it impracticable to attempt making a landing, and came to anchor in a cove some distance up river. Here she dragged and carried away an anchor, and Capt Deering brought her up to Bucksport to lay out the gale.

—We can assure our readers that "that man" hasn't been arrested. He is still seen everywhere at once. He looms up over the heads of little boys, reaching down to pick their pockets. They can't avoid him; they go round this corner to avoid him, and, whew! they run right smack into his face; when the nocturnal veil begins to shut down, they take their hearts in their mouths and run for home, just in time to escape his immense strides in chase. Parents will be saved a great deal of trouble in keeping their children home after dark; and so the old saw holds good—there can be no great evil without some little good.

—An interesting spectacle was that of yesterday afternoon, when the rails of Kenduskeag Bridge were lined by a crowd of roosters who for two hours disgraced the city and insulted passers by their coarse remarks, whistling rough music, and throwing lip generally. The carousals of our young bloods on the streets add force to the fears of "that man." Police! Police!

PERSONAL. J. Edwin Sherman, Esq., of Bucksport, leaves for Europe this morning to exhibit his process of manufacturing steel. By special invitation from the English government he is to exhibit before the War and Naval Bureaus of England, after which he will probably visit the leading cities of the old country and make arrangements for establishing manufactories in such localities as seem to offer especial inducements. He will be accompanied by Dr. B. F. Teft of Brewer.

A CHANGE OF HOTELS. On Saturday night a young man and younger woman came to the Franklin House where the man registered the names of "Geo. Simpson and wife, Bradford." Yesterday an old gentleman came down from Orono in search of his daughter, a miss of 13, and found her in the person of the "Mrs. Simpson" named on the register, and took her home with him. The "husband" proved to be a Mr. Preble, a young man of 19, belonging in Bradford, and his quarters at the Franklin were exchanged for less commodious, though more secure apartments, where he will be in less danger of interruption, at the Watch House.

—A correspondent mentions as a singular circumstance, that the very morning of the publication of Capt. Deering's letter against the Bucksport Railroad, he was obliged to run his steamer to Bucksport for a safe harbor.

—For attentions to Hugh De Payen's Commandery of Knights Templar, during their late visit to Bangor, St. John's Commandery of this city are the recipients of a card of thanks elegantly engrossed and framed, which will undoubtedly be assigned a prominent place in the new Hall. The card is decidedly complimentary to the city and citizens generally, as well as to members of the fraternity.

—Trains on the European and North American Railway commence running to Mattawamkeag to-day, leaving Bangor at 7 30 A. M. and 7.20 P. M. Returning trains leave Mattawamkeag at 4.15 A. M. and 1.10 P M.

—Our Boys and Girls for Nov. 27 is out, full as ever with good things.

DETENTION OF THE STEAMER CAMBRIDGE. The steamer Cambridge, had her last trip from Bangor to Boston, prolonged 24 hours owing to the severity of the gale. She lay over at Rockland Wednesday night, starting on Thursday morning at five o'clock, but was obliged to come to anchor at Boothbay and remained all day, much to the disappointment of her 150 passengers, the majority of whom were intending to enjoy their Thanksgiving in Boston. A splendid dinner was provided, which the passengers enjoyed by invitation of Captain Johnson. Subsequently, at a meeting of the passengers, a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to Captain Johnson and Mr Ryer, the steward, for the dinner and attentions. At 8 o'clock Thursday evening, the gale having abated, she started again on her voyage, having a magnificent moonlight sail, and arriving safely at Boston at seven o'clock Friday morning

POLICE COURT. Saturday, Nov. 20th, 1869

Hugh Fahey was brought in for an assault committed in May last upon officer Weymouth and fined $10 and costs

Thos Gallagher was before the Court on charge of having in his possession certain liquors, the same being intended for unlawful sale The police seized several packages of liquor in the stable of defendant, but he pleaded entire ignorance of them. The Court, however, failed to see it in the same light, and imposed the usual fine of $50 and costs, from which Thomas appealed

John Farnham was brought in for threatening to make an assault upon a law-abiding and peaceably disposed citizen, and was put under bonds in the sum of $200 to keep the peace for one year.

FIRE. The saw and shingle mill on Hoyt Brook Argyle, owned by Messrs. Stetson & Co, of this city, and Isaac Foster, Esq., of Argyle, was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday. Loss, about $16,000. No insurance

PERSONAL S. H. Buswell, Esq, of the city, has removed to Manchester, N. H., where he has engaged in the business of tanning and also in the purchase of wool skins We are sorry to lose Mr Buswell from the city, but if one will move away we can do no less than wish him abundant success in his new field of operations.

—Many of our neighbors are in the habit of sending imperfect papers to their exchanges. there is any "party" to whom a poorly printed, torn, or otherwise illegible copy is annoying, it is to the "scissors" who is looking for items. Sometimes we receive exchanges with one side blank, and a large corner doubled in, and now we have one under inspection with a large slice torn away in the very midst of its account of an important fire Give us good exchanges.

BANGOR PRODUCE MARKET—Saturday, Nov 20th. Hay seems to have taken a start upward after remaining at about one price for so long a time, the best loose selling at from $16 to 19 per ton Loose straw sells at from $6 to 10 per ton Oats are worth 65 to 70 cents, barley is worth $1 per bushel. Potatoes are selling at from 55 to 60 cents; but feed lots, or only the very best, sell at the latter price. Yellow eyed beans from $2 50 to $2 65, and extra pea beans $3 to 3.25. Butter has come in plenty for the two weeks past, and the most of it being of a common, or store quality, has sold dull at from 35 to 40 cents, but a nice article of lump isaacers, and would be quoted at a considerable higher price, eggs in small lots 38 cents, chicken from 12 to 17 cents Turkies sell at from 17 to 22 cents, according to the condition of the birds, round hogs at 12 cents

The above are the prices paid on our streets for produce.

We see the sales of Jackson potatoes are now made in Boston at 55 cents We do not know where our buyers look for a profit, and think the farmer ought not to complain

—Rev S. P Fay, of this city, is to lecture in Camden this evening upon the subject, "Too fast, too slow"

—The schools of Bangor had one representative—a lady—in the Educational Convention at Bath, last week.

DEDICATION A Livermore correspondent of the Lewiston Journal writes that the new Universalist Church, situated at Britton's Mills, was dedicated Tuesday, and the house was crowded to overflowing Rev. Mr Blacker, of Auburn, made the prayer, and the Rev Mr Battles, of Bangor, preached a very eloquent discourse from John 10, 10: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." I heard a member speak of it as the best sermon they ever heard. Among the other notables present I noticed ex-Governor Washburn, who presented the Society with their hymn books, Hon. Hastings Strickland, of Bangor, who presented a Bible for the desk, and Gen. Sam. Strickland, of Bangor, who gave $100 toward completing the church The bell which they have succeeded in getting weighs 1,048 lbs. and is a fine toned one. They have not settled a minister as yet, but hope to do so before long.

—Miss Kate Field reserved for her recent lecture in Boston the disclosure of a fact of which Boston has little reason to be proud When Miss Field returned from the Adirondacks and proposed lecturing on her summer experiences in that region, she hoped also to be able to raise in Boston the funds for the purchase of the John Brown Farm The gentleman to whom she presented the case gave abundant promises, but no greenbacks. Wearied out at last, she telegraphed to a gentleman in New York, asking what could be done here. Within forty-eight hours a dispatch was sent back announcing that the sum was raised and at her command.—[N Y. Tribune.

Miss Field is a sincere woman as well as a popular lecturer, and we are glad our readers are to have an opportunity to hear her in a few days.

SURGICAL OPERATION. Dr. George E Brickett, assisted by Dr. Z Dunham, of Winthrop, removed an ovarian tumor, together with the right ovary, from Miss S Patten of Burnham, on Tuesday, 16th inst. Weight of tumor 56 pounds

—The store of Wm C. Hammond & Co., at Van Buren, together with contents, was entirely destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning last; also two dwellings owned by Mr Hammond. Loss, about $26,000. Insured with Fuller Brothers for $11,250, with J. B. Foster $5,000, with Philip Coombs $5,000.

—The people of Camden are taking the bull by the horns. They have commenced temperance work in the old Washingtonian style, and propose to appeal directly to those who need help to avoid the evil of intemperance. Such movements will receive the hearty "God-speed" of everybody everywhere.

FIRE IN LEWISTON. Soon after 11 o'clock Saturday night fire was discovered in the picker room of Bates' mill, but was soon extinguished. It is supposed that it originated from spontaneous combustion in cotton. Loss of stock about $6,000. Insured.

—The officers are after the liquor dealers in North Berwick.

—FRANCIS EVERETT WEBB, Esq., died very suddenly at his residence, in Winthrop, at half-past five o'clock on Saturday morning last Mr. Webb was born in Winthrop, March 13, 1829. He graduated from Bowdoin College in 1853, was tutor in his Alma Mater in 1854-5; admitted to the bar in Kennebec county in 1856 He was representative from his native town two years, and treasurer thereof for several years At the last election he was again chosen representative from Winthrop, County Attorney for Kennebec, and received a large vote for Senator These facts indicate his popularity, but only those who knew him intimately can fully appreciate his real worth He was faithful to every trust, kind and generous to the needy, prompt and generous to defend the right As an earnest Sunday School teacher, one of our most useful and highly esteemed citizens, and as a devoted husband, father and friend, his loss will be keenly felt —Stephen Foster, Esq., who died in Fort Atkinson, Wis., in October, was formerly a resident for many years of Bangor He held the office of Register of Deeds for this county for ten years He was a worthy citizen, and had a large circle of friends here as well as in his new residence He went west in 1845, and subsequently held many offices of trust there He was buried with Masonic honors The Fort Atkinson Herald says:—"The high respect in which he was held by the fraternity was evinced by the fact that nearly all the surrounding Lodges sent large delegations to assist in paying a suitable tribute to his memory A special train of cars was run up from Janesville to convey the brethren from that city The funeral procession was doubtless the longest ever seen in this village."

—Walter Brown was the victor by two boat lengths in his international sculling match with J H. Sadler, of London, at Newcastle on Tyne, on Friday last

—A man named Asahel F. Lowell, belonging in Limington, aged 65 years, fell from the roof of a house in Cape Elizabeth, which he was repairing, on Friday, breaking his skull and killing him instantly

—A man named John Reynolds was arrested in Portland Friday, for a desperate assault committed upon an officer in Lawrence, Mass., about three years ago. The officers of Lawrence have had track of him several times but until now he has evaded arrest —The Biddeford Journal says Levi A. Brackett caught a hook trout in Acton weighing 8 pounds and measuring 21 inches long by 11 in girth.

—The Press says that Friday morning a little child aged four years, named Bertie Blood, residing at No 138, Cumberland st., Portland, accidentally pulled a large coffee-pot, filled with the boiling liquid, over her, and was very badly scalded.

—The Press says that a fellow named Clough, who worked for the photographer, J. O. Durgin, of Portland, last summer, and took a number of excellent stereoscopic views, decamped early in the fall, taking a valuable instrument and some $40 in money The case was put into the hands of a detective and Clough has been arrested in Hartford, Conn

—The following patents have been granted to Maine inventors the past week E J Pinkham, of Portland, for hanging lower topsail yards; William M Mayall, Gray, corn-sheller, Erastus C Philbrick, Bath, lip-shield, Cyrus W Strout, Hallowell, design for floor oil cloth, J M Richardson, Stockton, covering apparatus

—Professor Cruttenden, who was one of the leading debaters at the Educational Convention, Bath, is blind, he having lost his sight some two years ago by taking an overdose of quinine, says the Times

—Charles Loring, of Guilford, tells the Dover Gazette that he harvested from one acre of land this fall 125 bushels of good ripe ears of corn, 6½ bushels of beans, 6 bushels turnips, and one cart load of pumpkins

—The Democrat says that last Saturday week an honest old farmer from Buxton visited Biddeford and unfortunately fell into bad company. He was the owner of a valuable horse Several small-fry horse jockeys being desirous of possessing themselves of his horse, induced the old gentleman to imbibe, and after a short time he became oblivious, or nearly so. While in this state he was induced to "swap horses," and in exchange for his he received an entirely worthless "old plug," and the parties made off with their prize City Marshal Hill sent officers in pursuit of the rascals, and they were overhauled about ten miles from the city, the horse rescued and returned to its lawful owner.

—A cable dispatch from London, Eng., Oct. 11, announces the loss of the bark Cuba, of New York, at Holyhead, and that only five of her crew were saved. The Cuba was commanded by Capt. Arthur Prince, formerly of Thomaston, who had with him his whole family, consisting of his wife and two children, and all have perished by the loss of this vessel.

—Lewiston celebrated Thanksgiving day, among other things, with a prize dog fight.

—The Lewiston Journal says Mr W W Bessie, of Buckfield, let a horse and buggy to a man to go to Lewiston. Another man engaged a ride with him, but when half way, was forced out of the carriage by the exhibition of a pistol. The horse and carriage have not been heard from.

—A Thomaston correspondent of the Bath Times says that the convicts in the State prison were furnished with a turkey dinner on Thanksgiving day, and allowed three hours recreation in one of the large shops, which they seemed to enjoy very much in talking, singing, jumping and dancing without restraint. They all behaved with perfect propriety, and everything passed off to the satisfaction of all parties. It took 28 turkeys to feed the 177 convicts now in prison, which is the largest number of convicts ever in prison at any one time.

—The Calais Advertiser says the locomotive G M Porter, belonging to the Calais and Baring Railroad Company, exploded its boiler near Milltown on Monday, Nov. 15th, while running at a slow rate of speed The engineer and fireman were the only persons on the engine at the time and both escaped with but little injury.

—The dwelling house, barns and outhouses belonging to Mr. Horatio Hill, in Baring, N. B., with nearly all their contents, were destroyed by fire on Friday night last. In the barn was 45 tons of hay, worth some $900; also over 100 bushels of oats. The loss is estimated at $3,000; insured for only $2,000. The fire caught in the barn and was no doubt the work of an incendiary, says the Calais Advertiser.

—The Dexter Gazette says: "Woodsmen have passed through this town in large numbers the past twenty weeks making ready for the winter's work. The [illegible] at the Exchange on Thursday last was over one hundred, which is certainly a pretty good day's work for a country place."

SERIOUS RAILROAD ACCIDENT—TRAIN BLOWN FROM THE TRACK. The town of Boston Four Corners, in New York, was visited by a terrible storm on Wednesday. Buildings were unroofed, and other damage done. The Harlem Railroad train that left Chatham at nine o'clock in the morning, was blown from the track about a mile north of Boston Four Corners, nothing remaining on the track but the locomotive. The cars were lifted from the track by the force of the wind, and hurled seventy-five feet down a steep embankment, rolling over and over in their fall The baggage car containing the mails was destroyed by taking fire from the stove, and the baggageman barely escaped with his life. The express and smoking car combined received less damage, the express matter being saved. Two passengers in the two coaches were all more or less injured. One boy was killed outright Two passengers were fatally injured The following is a list of those most severely injured

A boy, supposed to be Mr Brade, of Armeda, killed and partially burned, his body still remains in the car. Burdett Curtis, Catskill, scalp torn off and injured internally, recovery doubtful. Chester Goodale and wife, South Egremont, Mass; the former considerably bruised about the head and shoulders; Mrs. Goodale, an old lady, received a severe shock, and is badly cut about the head and face; recovery doubtful. Miss F. A. Pearson, Armenia, cut about the head and face. James Halstead, Mount Rigi, injured about the head and hands; William Van Vleet, brakeman, considerably jammed.

The place where the accident occurred is a very exposed one, the wind from the east rushing through a gorge in the mountains with resistless fury, and similar accidents have happened several times before.

Discovery of a Monster in a Young Lady's Chamber.

From the Louisville Courier Journal, Nov. 2.

The highly dramatic circumstance about to be related proves (firstly) that people should always look before they leap, and (secondly) that some females are not as stout hearted as others. It was a Third street mansion, not far from the city's local point, and in the pale moon of last Sabbath night, when naught save the lulling roar of the great falls broke the deep silence of the hour. Within the mansion reside two sisters and their cousin, all young, and fair, and refined. As a just sequence of these qualities, the young ladies had spent the evening in question with a gay company of visitors. When these had said "good night" and passed out into the hushed thoroughfare, the parlors were darkened, and the three misses of the house withdrew to the family room. Paterfamilias being absent, the good dame received all the ante-slumber kisses, and they were imprinted with added affection because of the missing papa. This dutiful service done, the daughters sought their boudoir in the story above. It is situated three floors from terra firma, has a front outlook upon the street, and the L roof for a rear prospect. The eldest of the party left the room in advance. Just as she had lighted the gas, the younger, seeing a huge object stretched at full length upon the bed, exclaimed in the wildest alarm to her companions:

'Oh! Oh! there's a man on the bed!"

It is not easy to imagine the appalling effect of this exclamation upon three timid females, so far removed from human assistance at the dead hours of the night. Of course the room was instantly emptied. The two younger girls fled in terror to the front balcony, while the eldest sprang through the back window upon the roof, and startled the neighborhood by crying with all her vocal might:

'Help! robbers in the house! Help! Ma! ma! ma! Oh, there's a man on the bed! help! help!"

And she kept stamping about the roof and vociferating at this rate until her mother, nearly breathless, rushed up to the room, expecting to see her darling children at the mercy of some stalwart ruffian. The only monster to be seen was a dog, the big, shaggy, old house-dog!—He was still on the bed, but he now sat up, and gazed around, more affrighted than anybody else on the premises. This discovery was made simultaneously by the mother and the two girls who had tremblingly sought refuge on the balcony. On beholding the innocent cause of the great scare, the inmates of the room sent forth peal on peal of hearty laughter. The sounds reaching the young lady who strode the house-top with such reckless agility, she joined in the laughing chorus, and drowsy echo was thoroughly awakened. As the shrill and merry 'Ha-ha-ha!' and the occasional expression 'Only a dog!' were borne upon the stilly air, the neighboring night-caps began to disappear.—The final tableau, as viewed from a commanding position, was statuesquely novel and interesting. Almost overcome by hysterical laughter, the heroine of the turret scrambled to the boudoir window, and was lifted up and drawn in by main force by all the arms the household could bring to bard. The precious freight is hoisted in, the window closed, and so is the picturesque midnight scene. 'Get down stairs, Prune!' a collision of kid and dog hide, a growl and a lively pattering on the back steps are heard, and all 'lie down to pleasant dreams.'

A slightly modified version of 'La Sonnambula!'

NASBY.

The Ex-Postmaster Admitted to the Bar.

Wunst agin a forchoon hez been within my grasp, and wunst agin hev I permitted it to slip from me! Ijeot! Fool! Loonatic! I arrived in this city two days before the recent election, feelin that where votes were in such a demand there must be suthin to be made for me. By inquiry I found where the headquarters uv the Democratic General Committee for the city wuz located, and at about 10 A. M. which means in the mornin, I went there intendin to offer myself ez a man of all work for two days succeedin. I found there a vast crowd uv men, who were all uv em like me in some respects, varyin uv course in many pints, but all uv the same species.—The chairman uv the committee was distributin funds to em to be voosed, and they waz walkin up to get instructions in a sort uv procession. Noticin that the biznis was bein done loosely, I dropped into the procession, and shoor enuff the man distributin handid me a package, sayin, 'Terrence, be shoor you git em all up from the ship—Barney McShane will give yez the papers for em, and tell yez what names to vote em under!"

He had mistook me for Terrence somebody—shood I undeceeve him? Never! so slippin the package into my pocket I answered, asoomin the Irish brogue:

'Arrah, musha, be jabers my jewel, I'm the bye.'

Fortunately I wuz crowded out before I hed time to air much more Irish. I wuzn't a success ez a talkin Irishman. At the foot uv the stairs I opened my package.—It wuz greenbax! 'This money,' I sed to myself, 'wuz given to me to further the coz of Democrisy; for that purpose I'll use it. I'll start a grocery.' And forthwith that day, I leased a room in a Democratic locality, purchased a counter, a barl uv whiskey, a dozen tumblers, a lithograph portrate uv Gineral Jackson and Gov. Hoffman, and wuz all ready for bizness the mornin uv eleckshun.

There wuz a rush the moment I took the shutters down, and I took in money faster than I ever had before in my life.

'At last,' sed I exultinly, 'at last I hev found my speer. Nasby, yoor in luck—luck. I'll drink to my luck.'

And I took a nip. Skasely wuz it down before a ward politishun cum in with three or four voters wich he wuz takin care uv. They drank, the leeder of the party askin me to jine with em wich I did. Ez they went out I coodent avoid drinkin to the success of the ticket; then to the confooshun of Horris Greeley, then to the memry of James Bookannon, then to the memry of Franklin Pierce; then to Jeff Davis, and by this time I found myself outside uv the bar into the middle of the room, in a confoosed state of mind and body. In short, I wuz very drunk. Noo York whiskey ain't like the Kentuck article.

At this critical moment a man entered hurriedly, and seein me leanin agin the wall, went behind the bar and helped himself. Seein him behind the bar, I forgot that I was the landlord myself. I knowed I wuz in a grosery—that bein where I am most of the time—but in my intoxication I forgot that I was landlord, and the miserable wretch behind the bar, comprehendin the sitooashen, let me go on in my delooshen. Staggerin up to the bar I sed,

'Set em up agin,' wich he did, and I drank solemnly to the memory uv George H. Pendleton and the other dead Democracy uv my own whiskey, and then, like the loonatic I wuz, I paid for it out uv my own pockit and I kept paying for whiskey for others ez long ez I had a dollar! The man behind the bar then asked me to drink, wich I did; then I asked a crowd uv fellows wich cum in to drink with me, telling the new bar-keeper to charge it, wich he sed he wood, laffin uproariously.

I needn't continyoo this confession. Suffice it to say, that the next mornin I awoke in that identical room chilled completely thru. There wuz no whiskey in the barrel, not enuff for my mornin's nip, and I hedn't a cent in my pockit, ez I had paid all that wuz left uv the committee's money and what I hed taken in early in the day for my own licker to the fello who took advantage of my own condishn to usurp my place!

I shall never succeed on that side uv the bar. I am not kalkilated to take care uv my own whiskey.

Its astonishin how strong habit is! The moment I found I had credit, I commenst improvin uv it. 'Set em up!' I shreekt, ez each new squad came in. 'Set em up!' and the alacrity with which they drank wuz wonderful. The news got out that in sich a place there wuz a loonatic treatin everybody who came in, and a perfect stream rushed in.

I remember but very little uv wat occurred. I recollect distinctly uv voting three or four times and uv returning each time to my place and treatin a crowd, tellin the bar-keeper to charge it. I remember wunst feelin bad for him, and sayin confidentially to a man who wuz takin suthin with me, that this house wouldn't last long if it continyood to giv credit miscellaneously, forgettin in my drunkenness that it wuz my whiskey that it wuz my whiskey I wuz drinkin and givin to others to drink all the time!

I shel not, however, leave Noo York.—We hev got the Legislature now, and I shel find suthin to do. We shel, of course, repeal the Metropolitan Poleese law, and all other laws wich [illegible] out uv [illegible] ... [illegible] It will be [illegible] is the troo Democratic [illegible] We hev rat Ablishnists to tax, and the capital is in our hands, and here I stay. To get an offis I may hev to change my name to Michael, ez I did wunst before, but I shel do it. I am too old to wander up and down the earth, and here I stick.

THE BROKEN HOME.

"TRUTH STRANGER THAN FICTION."

In San Francisco, on the north side of Folsom street, overlooking Mission Bay, stands a palatial residence.

The interior of this house is even more beautiful than its exterior, every apartment being in its way a gem of magnificence and refinement.

The library especially realizes the most perfect ideal of an elegant and cultured home.

And yet, at the moment we look in upon him—one August afternoon, as he occupied his library—the proprietor of all this wealth appeared of all men the most miserable.

He was Mr. Morton Preble, for many years a leading banker of San Francisco.

It was in vain that the broad bay-window at the south end of the room had been opened, giving ingress to the sunshine and the fragrance of rare flowers—in vain that the walls were lined with richly carved book-cases and paintings—in vain that soft couches and luxurious chairs had been gathered around him.

He was wretched.

He lay on a sofa in the depths of the great bay window, the wreck of a once powerful man. His figure was thin and gaunt; his face white as marble; his eyes having an expression of woful apprehension, of harrowing anxiety, of dreadful expectancy.

It was evident at a glance that no merely physical ailment had made him what he was.

By what withering secret, by what destroying affliction, had he been thus agonized? thus haunted? thus hunted? he so noble and good! he so wealthy and distinguished!

As he moved restlessly upon his luxurious cushions the pretty clock on the mantel-piece struck five, every stroke seeming to fall like a hammer upon the heart of the nervous invalid. He aroused himself, struggling feebly to a sitting posture.

'Oh, will this fatal day never, never pass' he murmured, 'nor bring us relief?'

Noticing with a nervous start that he was alone, he touched a bell upon a table before him, and called:

'Helen, Helen! where are you?'

Before the echoes of his voice had died out a step was heard, and his wife entered his presence.

'I left you only for a moment, Morton,' she said, advancing to the banker's side.—'You were dozing, I think. I wished to send for the doctor.'

She was a beautiful woman of some six and thirty years, graceful, with broad white brows, and loving eyes, in which the brightness and sweetness of a sunshiny nature were still perceptible, under a grief and anxiety no less poignant than that evinced by her husband.

'The doctor!' he echoed, half-reproachfully.

'Yes, dear,' she said, in a calm and cheerful voice, as she drew a chair to the side of the sofa, and sat down, stroking the corrugated forehead of the invalid with a magnetic touch. 'He will be here immediately. Your last nervous crisis alarmed me. You may become seriously ill.'

Mr. Preble bestowed an affectionate look upon his wife, but said despondently:

'The doctor! He cannot minister to a mind diseased. Oh, if these long hours would only pass! If I only knew what the day has yet in store for us!'

'Look up, Morton,' enjoined Mrs. Preble with a reverently trustful glance upward through the open window at the blue sky, and as if looking beyond the azure clouds therein. 'Let us appeal from the injustice and wickedness of earth to the goodness and mercy of Heaven.'

The banker gave a low sobbing sigh.

'I cannot look up, Helen,' he answered, with a passionate tremor in his voice—'only down, down at the grave that is opening before me!'

Mrs. Preble continued to stroke his forehead softly, while she lifted her pale face to the sunlight streaming into the apartment.

'Look up, Morton—always look up!' she again enjoined upon the invalid. 'During all these fourteen years of agony, I have not once doubted the goodness nor the justice of Heaven. 'Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted.' I believe that we shall yet rejoice more keenly than we have mourned, and that we shall come to a glorious day of joy beyond all this long night of sorrow.'

The face of the invalid lighted up with an answering glow, and he murmured—

'Glorious faith! My wife, you are, indeed a blessed comforter. Perhaps, after all, you are right.'

A knock resounded on a side door at this juncture, and the next moment Dr. Hutton, the family physician, for whom Mrs. Preble had sent, entered the room.

He was an old man, portly in figure, with white hair and beard, but with a fresh and ruddy complexion, a pair of shrewd blue eyes, and with an exuberant boyishness of manner that sat well upon him.—He had a kind heart and a clear head. He approached the sofa, after greeting the husband and wife, and lifted the thin, restless hand of the invalid, feeling his pulse.

'Quite a high fever,' he said, after a brief pause. 'Worrying again, eh, Mr. Preble? You are wearing yourself out. Medicine will do you no good so long as your mind is in its present condition. I must give you an opiate—'

'Not now, doctor,' interposed the banker. 'I cannot—must not—sleep to-day. I need to be broad awake now, for I cannot tell at any moment what the next may bring forth. I am looking for the culmination of all my years of anguish—for the crowning agony of the whole. Perhaps even now—Ah, what was that?'

He started up wildly, and then, as the sound that had disturbed him was not repeated, he sank back again on his cushions palid and panting.

The doctor looked at Mrs. Preble with an anxious, questioning glance.

'It is the anniversary,' she replied to his unspoken inquiry—'the anniversary of our loss.'

'Ay, yes,' said the doctor—'I remember.

'Yes, it is another of those terrible days,' cried the banker, in a hollow whisper.—'Sit down, doctor, and I will tell you the whole story. I can think of nothing else to-day, and am almost wild with apprehension and anxiety. Sit down.'

Dr. Hutton drew up a chair and seated himself, his face expressing the double solicitude of a friend and physician.

'You know us fourteen years ago, doctor,' said Mr. Preble. 'We lived then just where we do now, in a cottage on the site of this great mansion. There were but the three of us—Helen and I and our three-year old Jessie. And it was fourteen years old to-day that our little Jessie was stolen from us.'

'I remember it,' said the doctor, softly. 'Yet might she not have been lost, Mr. Preble? She went out to play in the garden, if I remember rightly, and was never seen by you again. She might have strayed away—'

'So we thought for a whole year, doctor,' interrupted the banker, 'We never dreamed that she had been stolen. We searched everywhere for her, and offered immense rewards for her recovery. I employed detectives, but all to no purpose. When our little Jessie ran down the steps into that flower garden,' and he pointed to the front of the house, as if the earth had opened and swallowed her up, 'we never saw her again.'

'She must have found the gate open and wandered out,' suggested Dr. Hutton.—'She might have strolled down to the waters and been drowned.'

The banker fixed his burning eyes upon the physician's face, and whispered:

'I said we never saw the poor child again. I did not say we had not heard of her. She was lost on the 9th of August, 1854. For a year we thought her dead—But on the anniversary of our loss we received a written message concerning her.'

'A message!' cried Dr. Hutton, starting.

'A mere scrawl—a single line, in a hand evidently disguised,' said the banker.—'Here it is.'

He produced a dingy scrap of paper from a drawer in the table, and held it up to the view of the physician, who read as follows:

'August 9, 1855. Jessie, ha, ha, Jessie.'

Dr. Hutton looked, with a puzzled air, from the scrap of paper, which he turned over and over, to the countenance of the banker.

'I can make nothing of this,' he declared. 'It is merely a date, with the name of your lost daughter. It tells me nothing.'

'Nor did it us, at first,' said Mr. Preble. 'Then that name and that date, with the demon laugh connecting them, set us to thinking. A whole year we agonized over the dreadful problem, and then we received another message, which you shall see.'

He thrust a second slip of paper, identical in shape and appearance with the first, before the gaze of Dr. Hutton, who read it aloud:

'August 9, 1856. Your Jessie still lives.'

The physician started, as if electrified.

'Ah! this is something definite—something decisive,' he muttered. 'It convinced you that your daughter was still living.'

'Yes, doctor,' said Mr. Preble, 'and every anniversary of that day has brought us some message. The disappearance of the child, mysterious as it is, does not seem to me half so strange as that the villain who took her away could contrive to communicate with us every year since, and always on a particular day—the anniversary of that on which she was stolen—without our being able to discover who he is. And a still greater wonder to me is, what can be his motive. It seems incredible. If it was stated in a novel, many people would not believe it. But 'truth is stranger than fiction.'

Mrs. Preble drew from her husband's breast pocket his note book, opened it to the proper page, and presented it to the physician.

Dr. Hutton adjusted his spectacles, glanced over the page, and then slowly read the group of entries aloud. The entry the first year is as follows:

'August 9, 1855. Jessie, ha, ha! Jessie.'

And the next year it is—

'August 9, 1856. Your Jessie still lives!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1857. She is in good hands!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1858. She is well as ever!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1859. I saw her yesterday!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1860. She's growing rapidly!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1861. She continues to do well!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1862. I've seen her again!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1863. She's becoming a woman!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1864. Your child is thirteen!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1865. She's lovelier than ever!'

And the next—

'August 9, 1866. She's really charming!'

And last year it is—

'August 9, 1867. My reward is at hand!'

And what shall we get to-day?

The physician looked up and fixed his thoughtful gaze on the bereaved husband and wife.

'How did these messages come to you?' he demanded.

'Invariably by post,' replied Mr. Preble. 'Usually to the house, but sometimes to the office.'

'And you have never seen their author?'

'Never.'

'The last of them is dated, I see, a year ago to-day.'

'Yes, yes,' faltered the banker, 'and the time has come for another message. This is the 9th of August, 1868.'

'I see,' said Dr. Hutton. 'And this is the secret of your terrible excitement. You are expecting to receive to-day another of these strange messages.'

There was a brief silence. Mrs. Preble's hand fluttered in its task, and her face grew very pale. The banker breathed gaspingly. The physician regarded them both in friendly sympathy.

'We shall hear of her again to-day,' said Mr. Preble; 'and what will the message be?'

The mother averted her face. Her brave heart faltered as that question echoed in her soul.

'The writer of these letters is unquestionably the abductor of your child,' said Dr. Hutton. 'Have you any suspicion as to his identity?'

'Not the slightest,' said Mr. Preble.—'We have puzzled over the problem for many years, but we cannot guess who he is.'

'Think,' said the doctor. 'Have you no enemy? I do not mean people with whom you are not friendly—every stirring man has plenty of these—but a downright enemy? Is there no man whom you knew in the East who hated you? No one against whom you were called upon to testify—no one whom you possibly injured?'

The banker shook his head. He had asked himself all these questions repeatedly.

'I have no such enemy, doctor,' he answered, with sincerity of voice and manner.

'And Mrs. Preble?' suggested the Dr., turning to her. 'Have you no rejected suitor who might be revengeful enough to desolate your home?'

'No,' said the lady. 'I was married early. Morton was my first lover.'

'This is strange—very strange!' muttered the doctor. 'You are not conscious of having an enemy in the world, and yet you have an enemy—a hidden foe—a fiend in human form—who is working against you a fearful hatred. And you have not the slightest suspicion as to whom he is?'

'Not the slightest,' declared the banker.

'Not the slightest,' echoed Mrs. Preble. 'My husband had a step-brother who might have been capable of this infamy—but he is dead!'

'The handwriting is not familiar?'

'No. It is merely a rude scrawl, as you see,' said the banker. 'It suggests nothing—except that it is evidently disguised.'

Again there was a profound silence.

'Our child is seventeen years old now,' at length murmured Mrs. Preble, her voice trembling. 'She is on the threshold of womanhood. No doubt, during all these years she has yearned for us, wherever she may be, as we have yearned for her.'

'But where is she?' asked the physician—and now his voice was broken by his deep sympathy with the agonized parents. 'Where can she be?'

'Heaven only knows,' answered the mother. 'Perhaps in San Francisco—perhaps in some rude hut in the interior, with some obscure farmer, and under a name that is not hers. I think her abductor would have carried her to some lonely region of the interior, among the valleys and mountains. Yet I never see a young girl in the streets without turning to look at her. I never hear a girlish voice without listening eagerly, half fancying that it may prove the voice of my lost Jessie.'

'Oh, pitying heaven!' sighed Dr. Hutton, dashing a flood of tears from his eyes. Will this long agony never be over?'

'We hope so, and even believe so,' answered Mrs. Preble, with the firmness of an unfaltering trust in God's mercy. 'The last message we received from our enemy seems to point to some kind of a change.'

'True,' assented Dr. Hutton, looking at the message in question. 'It is unlike the others. It says that his 'reward is at hand.' He means either that he intends to marry your daughter, or that he intends to demand money of you for bringing her back—or both.'

'We shall soon know,' said Mrs. Preble, with forced calmness. 'To-day we shall have another message, no doubt. What will it be?'

The banker turned restlessly on his sofa and his face grew even paler.

'Whatever it is, let it come!' he murmured. 'Anything can be borne better than this awful suspense. Let it come.'

As if his impatient words had precipitated a crisis, a step was heard on the walk at this moment, and a ring at the front door followed.

'Another message!' breathed the banker.

A servant soon entered, bearing a letter, which he extended to Mr. Preble, saying—'The bearer is in the hall.'

With an eager gaze, the banker glanced at the superscription of the missive.

'It is from him!' he faltered.

He tore the envelope open.

It contained a slip of paper, of well-known shape and appearance, upon which was scrawled a single line, in an equally well-known hand-writing, which the banker exhibited to his wife and the physician.

This line was as follows:

'August 9, 1862. At six I will call.'

A shock of wonder and horror shook the three simultaneously.

'Will call!' cried Mr. Preble, starting to his feet, and glaring wildly around.

'Is coming here!' cried Mrs. Preble, also arising.

'It seems so,' said Dr. Hutton, his eyes again reverting to the message. 'He will be here at six o'clock, and see, it is six already.'

Even as he spoke, the clock on the mantel-piece commenced striking the appointed hour, and at that instant heavy footsteps resounded in the hall, approaching the library.

'It is he!' cried the doctor, also arising.

As the last stroke of the hour resounded, the door leading from the hall again opened.

One long and horrified glance cast the banker and his wife in that direction, and then she fell heavily to the floor.

Her senses had left her. The above we publish as a specimen chapter; but the continuation of this story will be found only in the N. Y. Ledger.
